

- Do you agree with matching the federal 30 gram limit, or should the GN set a lower limit?
- Should the GN allow Nunavut's youth to carry up to 5 grams without penalty, or should we be stricter?
- Should the GN be allowed to set restrictions on how cannabis can be stored in a home, including how much cannabis?

Growing cannabis

The federal government's proposed law allows individuals to grow their own cannabis and sets a limit of four plants per household.

Provinces and territories can set a lower limit. Benefits of allowing home growing relate to legal access. If people are able to grow their own cannabis on a small scale for personal consumption, they may be less likely to buy cannabis from illegal sources. On the other hand, risks of allowing home cultivation include normalizing cannabis with youth and increasing health and safety risks (e.g. fire, mold).

- What do you think about being able to grow cannabis at home?
- If the GN does allow growing at home, what rules or safeguards should it consider putting in place?

Role of landlords and building owners

There may be special considerations relating to growing and using cannabis in rented units, public housing units, and condos.

The GN will consider allowing landlords (including the Nunavut Housing Corporation) and condo-associations to restrict renters and condo-dwellers from growing and using recreational cannabis based on rules in rental agreements or condominium bylaws.

- Are there special considerations related to growing and using cannabis in rented units, public housing, or condos?
- What abilities should landlords and condo-associations have to prohibit growing cannabis in their dwellings?

Prohibited places

Nunavummiut over 19 will be allowed to consume cannabis in their homes and in some public spaces where tobacco is allowed.

To protect youth and limit second-hand smoke exposure, the GN proposes to prohibit smoking or vaping cannabis where tobacco is restricted and in certain other areas including vehicles, school grounds, hospital or health centre grounds, and playgrounds. Proposed legislation will establish territorial offenses and infractions for consumption in vehicles, public consumption, and public intoxication.